The Linda Saltzman New Investigator Award recognizes a single outstanding new investigator with 2-10 years of experience working in the field of gender-based violence and health. The CDC National Center for Injury Prevention and Control solicits nominations from senior investigators in the field, and convenes a committee of experts to select an outstanding individual to receive this national award once every two years. This is, without question, the most prestigious scholarly award in this field of study. Dr. Stockman being recognized by the CDC and a cadre of senior scholars as the most promising investigator in this area indicates that she, at a very early stage in her career, is recognized as a national leader in this area, increasingly recognized as central to health and development globally. It is a true mark of excellence for the Division of Global Public Health, Department of Medicine and the Center on Gender Equity and Health at UC San Diego to include Dr. Stockman among our faculty.